that will restore vigor to the digestive organs of a person 77 years old who had been troubled with indigestion for years, is worth looking into.

This Kang, woman says:
"I am 77 years old and for many years had suffered from indigestion which I supposed was caused by old age. Thought the weakened organs would never do good service any more.
"I became so weak I could hardly get about, my breath came with difficulty, I was really in a bad way. I lived as I always had, ate meat and other things that were clearly too heavy for my digestion, but I didn't know any better way.

"Five months ago I came to the conclusion that I would not live much longer without help of some kind. I was badly discouraged until one dev I read about Grape-Nuts, what it had done for others, and finally I concluded to try it myself.

"Wonder of wonders, what a change it made. I cat three heaving teaspoonifuls with cream for breakfast and the same amount for souner. Of course I cat fruit and something light to make I cat three heaving teaspoonifuls with cream for breakfast and the same amount for souner. "How good I feel. I can do more work in a given time than for the past five years. I can walk two miles or more and can hardly believe my own penses as to the change. I did not have much faith at first, but the next thing I knew I would get up in the morning and rush around and do things as easily it surprised me. All this change is clearly due to Grape-Nuts and I am thankful." Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little booklet. "The Road to Wellville," in packages, "There's a Reason."

SEVEN-MASTED SCHOONER LAWSON

HIGH TOWN, SCILLY ISLANDS, December 15.—Captain Dow, of the Accaed senouter Thomas W. Lawson, to-day told a terrible story of his excertence after being washed from the wessel. When he found that his ship was driving upon the rocks and morning more could be done he distributed life-belts and gave the order to the men to save themselves if they could. He advised them to climb into the rigging, which they did, but the vessel soon broke up. He almostly had two hours of awful suspense while struggling in the boiling sea, before ne was thrown upon the rocks, where he was found; then another two hours of scrambling and crawling before he reached a place of safety, where he found Engineer Rowe. All day long the two men crouched under the rocks, with heavy seas breaking over them, and in danger every moment of being washed away. Both the men were more dead than alive when rescued.

The wreck of the Lawson has occasioned some newspaper discussion on the advisability of building such enormous vissels. Although the papers grant that she had safely weathered the dangerous Atlantic passage, they believe that owing to this disaster no more—such many-masted—schooners are likely to be built.

With the wreck of the only seven-masted schooner in the world, which occurred in Broad Sound, off the Scilly Islands, sea-going men are recalling that the monster vessel, which was named after Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, was wrecked on Friday, the 13th of December, a combination in the minds of many sufficient to have wrecked a vessel with almost any number of masts, let alone the fatal mystic number of seven, a number never attempted by any other vessel afford, it is a curious coincidence which those who believe in the occult may explain as they can, that the vessel named after the author of the well-known books "Friday, the Thirteenth," should have gone to her doom on that fateful anniversary, taking with let fifteen of her crew as a tribute to an unlucky combination of figures or of circumstances.
